York, has not the experience of the last ten years verified and sustained what was said by this distinguished man of your State more than twenty years ago? And will you, with the experience of the past before your eyes when we come to you for a pitance like this—will you say that these railroads and means of communications shall not cross the Mississippi river?

But I will pass on to another branch of this subject, and notice another objection which has been made by gentlemen who yield a reluctant support to these grants.—The objection is this: The Government of the United States, it is said, is not a proprietor holding the soil and obtaining enhanced prices by reason of improvements growing out of settlement and population; it asks but one price from the beginning to the end of the transaction, and that price does but little more than cover the expenses of the management and sale of the lands. It is true that the Government does not ask an advanced price for its lands; but it is not virtually an enhancement of the price, if lands which have been in the market for years, when a railroad is projected through them, are sold for $250 an acre, or even for $125? Is it not, in other words, making that available which before was totally unavailable to this Government for revenue, and unavailable to the State for the same purpose?

But it is said that the price of these lands does but little more than pay the expenses of management and sale. Why is this? I ask you, gentlemen, to reflect on these facts, and you have the answer to the question.—Why is it that these lands do not defray the expenses of management and sale? Because you have to keep open land offices, as you have done in Missouri for the last thirty years, as long as the lands in the State are unsaleable and unavailable. But if you project railroads through those lands they will command a sale, and your land offices may be shut, and your registers and receivers may be dismissed, and this vast expense saved to the Government.

But I pass to another part of the subject. I desire gentlemen upon the floor to remember, that while one end of these railroads unites with the great highways which have been projected from the Atlantic seaboard, traversing the Valley of the Mississippi, the other end of both of these roads rests upon your frontier. Immediately adjoining your frontier, the policy of this Government in planting those Indian tribes upon our western frontier. They are scattered along opposite Missouri, Arkansas, and Iowa. I have been your policy to place them there; but in the progress of the age and of this Government, the position of the Indian has become like that of the Scorpion girl with fire. He sees the white man is east of him and at his heels—that he has bounded away beyond him, now busy thousands tread the shores of the Pacific west of him. He sees his hunting-ground invaded by the white man. He sees that the elk, and antelope, and the buffalo, are fast receding from his prairies. And let us prepare, lest at the moment when we least expect it, the war-whoop may be ringing in our ears, and these Indian tribes, goaded to madness, may come upon us, upon our defenceless frontier, and compel our hardy frontiersmen to defend with their rifles their firesides and homes from attack. As it was deemed the wisest policy to plant these tribes upon the frontier west of the Mississippi, it is not the policy of the Government to prepare for defence against any irruption of those tribes, when it can be done, without the necessity of garrisoning large bodies of troops upon our western borders?

Mr. Speaker, this Government has heretofore annually expended large sums of money for the transportation of supplies for Indians, and for our troops. By the treaty with Mexico it is our duty to protect her from the depredations of the Indians within our own borders, and by the acquisition of California and New Mexico, troops have been required along the routes to those possessions west of the Missouri. Since we are forming new treaties with the wild Indian tribes of the plains and mountains west of us, of course, the amount of property of the Government in supplies, annuities, and munitions of war, must be increased and with that an increase of expenditure.—But, sir, aid in constructing those roads. Again, sir, much will be gained to the Government in the entire security with which that property may be transported.—Heretofore those supplies have been carried up the Missouri river at a heavy cost to the Government, and with great peril and hazard of total loss, from the dangers of navigation in that turbulent stream.

Mr. Speaker, I find I have but a few minutes of my time left, and therefore will hasten to a conclusion. It has been said, and I find truthfully, by one of our modern historians, that of all inventions, the printing press and alphabet alone excepted, those inventions which abridge distances have done most for the civilization of our species.—Every improvement of the means of locomotion benefits mankind morally and intellectually, as well as materially, and not only facilitates the interchange of the various productions of nature and art, but tends to remove national and provincial antipathies and to bind together all the branches of the human family.

Sir, these advantages are not to be lightly esteemed by a people or a government occupying so wide an extent of country as ours, and where sectional interest too often engender prejudices that lead to alienation of feeling among those who should dwell together with fraternal affection, sympathize with each other in sorrow, and rejoice with each other in prosperity.

We all know, sir, how great were the fears entertained by many of our best citizens and most enlightened and purest statesmen, lest the acquisition of additional territory and the extension of our limits should result in the dismemberment of our glorious Union, and that it would fall to pieces from its own weight. But, sir, there is much to relieve those fears and gloomy forebodings of ill. The invention of the steam engine, and its application as a motive power, upon the oceans, upon our rivers and lakes, and the great highways which we are opening through our mountains and hills, and which are traversing our beautiful canyons, and broad and fertile prairies, and over which the car of commerce, freighted with the richest productions of our fields and workshops, is carried with a velocity which outstrips the wind by the iron horse, whose feet never wear, and whose strength never fails. This invention has contributed much to dissipate those fears and strengthen our hopes. By this wonderful discovery, for truly, sir, it seems that the steam engine will never cease to be a wonder, distance is annihilated; the East and the West are brought together, and we trust that under its happy influence the North and South will soon interchange, daily, those civilities which sweeten life and give it half its charms.

But sir, wonderful as are the results of the steam-engine, and happy as are its influences socially and politically, and however great its tendency to strengthen the bonds of our Union, another, if not greater discovery, exists, of more recent date, which promotes fraternal feeling, and thereby strengthens our hopes of the perpetuity of our free institutions. I refer to that beautiful invention by which the winged lightnings are made to obey our wishes, and as faithful messengers, daily and hourly to traverse their wily track with messages of love, friendship and affection from those who dwell upon the Atlantic to their brethren upon the western borders of Missouri.

The advantages resulting from associations and social intercourse, are happily illustrated in my own State. There we have the enterprising men of New England, bringing with them the habits and customs peculiar to the land of steady habits. There the chivalrous and generous sons of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and other Southern States. There, the frugal, upright and industrious Pennsylvanians, each bringing with him his provincialism, and other peculiarities of his native State. These are settled upon our State, in the neighborhood of our own hardy and warm hearted pioneers. At first, it may be, there is some formality in the first efforts and advances towards social intercourse, but by degrees, pre-existing prejudices are worn off, many amiable and noble traits are now discovered—attachments are formed between families, all the offices of friendship and good neighborhood are performed with cheerfulness.—The sons of New England lead to the altar the lovely daughters of the South; over all are thrown the ties of friendship and love, while each looks back with fond delight to the home of his childhood—the one to the granite hills of his beloved New England, and the other to the verdant plains of the sunny South, yet here is their home, here they dwell in peace, lovers of the Union, attached to the institutions of their country, and ready in a moment to strike down the pariahs of the world who seek to destroy the fair fabric which their fathers have reared, and which shelters and protects them. Extend, then, sir, your railroads; let them penetrate every State, thereby promote social intercourse, and bind together more closely the interests of our people; and though our territory extends from sea to sea, though States be multiplied until an hundred stars shall form the bright constellation—whose cheering light streams upon many a land, the hope of the oppressed and down-trodden who are struggling for freedom and independence, and the dread of tyrants who would quench that light and extinguish it forever—yet, sir, this glorious Union would stand, a blessing to us, and a bright example to others. Let it be your policy to grant lands for works of improvement like ours.—Let the Government pursue the even tenor of its way, content to secure the happiness of its people by wholesome laws wisely administered, holding out to every nation its own success, and its happiness and prosperity of its own people as a beacon-light, forming entangling alliances with none, but sympathizing with all in their struggles for freedom and independence, and it will have done more for the cause of free institutions than could be accomplished by the power of your Army and your Navy.

LIFE, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.
MORTIMORE'S
Bitter Cordial and Blood Purifier.
THIS popular CORDIAL, which has met with such extensive sale during the past year, surpasses all preparations put forth for similar purposes, and prove by its wonderful effects upon the human system, to be the GREATEST BLOOD PURIFIER in the world.
Most diseases have their origin in impurities of the blood, or a morbid and inactive state of the liver, and the great difficulty heretofore has been, that the various "blood purifiers" of the day, have only had a tendency to reduce the blood, and substitute an acid watery fluid—which must necessarily engender disease—reduce the vital powers, and prostrate the whole nervous system. This no doubt has been experienced by thousands, and the fact being well known, and even known to observe, as well as to many eminent physicians.
THE BITTER CORDIAL AND BLOOD PURIFIER acts entirely different upon the system.—While it acts gently upon the liver, sufficient to remove the impure or poisonous secretions, it acts also as a fine tonic to the stomach causing complete and healthy digestion—furnishing a pure saliva and proper nutriment for assimilating the blood, and leads forth with a vigorous and healthy action throughout the system.
For Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Pain or Misery in the Side or Region of the Heart, Jaundice, General Debility, and numerous other ailments, this CORDIAL stands unequalled.
Where persons have suffered from CHILLS and FEVERS or bilious attacks of any kind, have taken quinine or calomel, and weak and debilitated, or the effects of those strong medicines remaining in the system, this Cordial will very soon remove these, which, if let alone, might ruin the individual for life.
For Scalding, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, tetter or ring worm, pimples on the face or surface of the skin, and all other cutaneous eruptions, have their origin in impurities of the blood, and this BLOOD PURIFIER, in the use of this CORDIAL, will very soon remove these, which, if let alone, might ruin the individual for life.
Manufactured and sold wholesale and retail at the MEDICAL DEPOT, No. 135, North Third Street, near Washington Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.
For sale by Druggists generally in the city, and by Druggists and merchants generally throughout the Western and Southern States.
To the vast number of ladies and gentlemen who have used the BITTER CORDIAL AND BLOOD PURIFIER, and have given such ample testimony of its superior virtues, and have so universally recommended it to their friends, we acknowledge our obligations, and in return, we will keep an ample supply. Orders left at our Depot No. 135 North Third Street, for any number of bottles, will meet prompt attention, and sent, if desired, to any part of the country.

RHEUMATISM CURED!
Several thousand cases cured during the past year, comprising every grade and form of this dreadful and incurable disease.

Mortimore's
Rheumatic Compound & Blood Purifier.
THIS is the great remedy of the age, and proves to be one of the great discoveries made by man. It is of more value to afflicted and suffering humanity than all the Gold of California. This medicine has only been prominently before the public about three years, during which time probably more cases of Rheumatism have been cured by its use than all others put together, or any course of medicine prescribed by the most eminent physicians of the age.
Not only recent Acute Inflammatory cases, but old chronic cases of ten, twenty, thirty and even forty years standing, where they had been confined to their beds, or hobbled about on crutches, and fifteen years, the flesh had shrunk from their bones, still they have been cured. Ample testimony of facts is published in pamphlet form. The testimony of the highest character, entitled to the confidence of all men.
Manufactured and sold wholesale and retail by the original discoverer and proprietor at the Medical Depot, No. 135 North Third Street, between Vine street and Washington Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.
Price per bottle, three bottles $12, with a liberal discount by the dozen.
